CHURCH NEWS.

Charles Mayer will erect a $3,000 warehouse on West Washington street.

Methodists will be grieved to learn that Rev. Knapp G. Wood, of Mooreville, one of the pillars of the church is suffering from a malady that threatens to close his career in a short time.

Engines on the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Western railroad will be provided with the spark arrester in use on the I. & D. and S. road. Drawings for the improvement have been furnished to the master mechanic.

Next Monday, the Methodist ministers will discuss "Dancing as practiced by church members." From an unprejudiced and nonsectarian standpoint it appears to be about the same as that practiced by the world's people.

Unless the committee appointed by the board of trade to investigate the Vandall's day discrimination against the colored, hears something defensible for the colored, it will proceed to correct the abuse to suit their pleasure.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE GALLEY SLAVE.

From the preparations known to be in progress the public had come to expect something unusually fine in the way of scenery and music in the play of the "Galley Slave," at the Park theatre last night. From the advance notices of the play and the reputation of the actors it was likewise inferred that something exceptionally good in an artistic and histrionic point of view might be looked for. In no respect was the public disappointed. The scenery is new and beautiful, and all the appointments in keeping with it. The company is strong and well balanced, and the play is the best of its class yet produced. It is of the prevailing French stamp, the plot turning on bigamy, which barely failed of consummation. It is worked up in really an artistic style. The first act is located in Paris, and is a quiet, but not commonplace, the second in Rome, and gives a good opportunity to study the character of the audience of the unfolding of the plot; the third is on the Rhone, near Marseilles, and here the interest increases to a high pitch, and continues through the next act, which is located in the prison yard at Marseilles. The fifth act is the culmination of the plot, and closes artistically and without violence, leaving the audience with a feeling of satisfaction and pleasure. The "City of Dreadful Night," of Maudie Granger was a fine piece of acting. That lady has improved decidedly since her last appearance here and is now one of the most effective of American actresses. Her dressing was simple and appropriate. Signora Majorani, as "Francesca" was no less attractive. She is a remarkably fine actress. Miss Mortimer's "Psyche" was also first rate. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder's "Mrs. Gay" was good. Mr. Frank Evans as "Sidney Norcott" was full of strength, and received, as he deserved a full share of applause. Mr. Sullivan, as "Carson Le Bois" won the admiration of the audience as a thorough villain. Mr. Burns, as the travelling American, and Mr. McManus as the Scotch Orieans did their parts admirably.

The applause was loud and continuous after the close of the later acts, but with a show of taste and good sense worthy of all praise, the actors declined to destroy the effects of their splendid efforts by appearing before the curtain. The piece will run but two nights more and a matinee. It deserves a larger attendance than the Park can accommodate.

THE LYRA CARNIVAL.

From the preparations, the reputation of the society, and the few details that have come to light, it is generally expected that the carnival of the Lyra at the Park theatre on Friday night will be equal to or superior to anything that has been taken place here. The number and variety of masks, the number and beauty of the decorations, and the care that has been taken to make the occasion one of unqualified pleasure, all point to the success of the entertainment. Seats are secured at Cameron's.

The Courts.
The suit of the First national bank of Auburn against Hazard, Redley, Dunning & Cuyper, on note, was cancelled yesterday, the bank accepting 25 per cent from Cuyper, and getting judgment against Hazard and Dunning for the remainder. The bank failed to show that Redley's name was not forged, and it is stated that after the bank bought the note, and the officers were satisfied that Redley's name was forged, they asked him to make an affidavit to that effect, upon which Hazard was arrested and brought back from Chicago, the bank paying $40 as its share of the expenses. When Hazard was brought back he paid $17,000 to the bank, a part of which sum was applied to this note. Afterward this suit was instituted, and as effort made to hold Redley for the balance due.

The Congressional Convention.
The congressional convention will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the United States district court room. There are eighty-five delegates to the convention, and as the room is somewhat restricted in dimensions, no one will be admitted but members and representatives of the press. The work of the convention is laid out by the state central committee, is to select two delegates to the national convention, a member of the state central committee, and fix upon a time for holding the nominating convention.

The only fight is over the selection of delegates to Chicago, there is a lively fight going on. Among the candidates who have not been mentioned are Levi Ritter, Stanton J. Peeler, R. O. Hawkins, J. B. McFadden of Shelbyville, and A. C. Harris.

So far as appears, there is no opposition to John C. New from members of the state central committee, and he will probably be elected by acclamation.

In reply to the often repeated question, whether delegates to these congressional conventions are to hold over to nominating conventions for congressmen, Chairman New says: "Such was the intention of the state committee in framing a call, but it is entirely within the power of each county to determine that for itself."

The Cincinnati News.
Interview me on the Cincinnati convention," said John Carlton, bailiff of room No. 1 superior court, to a News reporter, this morning.

"Well, what do you think of sending the convention there?"

"I accept it as a good omen. The last democratic presidential candidate elected was nominated there in 1856, and the convention has not been held there since. We'll elect our man this time. It was a lively time we had in 1856, and I took an active part. I was auditor then, and Cincinnati was divided. The vast multitude was for Douglas, and the court house for Buchanan. We beat 'em with a sight of satisfaction."

"No, I think Seymour and Hendricks will be nominated by resolution. Seymour will step out and leave Hendricks in the presidential chair. It would be the smartest thing they could do."

"Wade and Ben Fletcher."

Wade, now in jail on the charge of the murder of Brown, has made repeated statements in which, inferentially, the act of the killing is laid upon Mrs. Brown's brother, Ben Fletcher. Mr. Edward Davis called on The News this afternoon, and says that he personally knows that on the night of the killing Fletcher was not in Marion county, but was at a distant point lying on a rich lay, in a precarious condition, where he still lies, and has been bedfast for more than five weeks. Mr. Davis has communicated these facts to Prosecutor Elam.

The L. D. & S. Road.
The excursion from Toledo over the L. D. & S. railroad, started at 1:30 this afternoon. It was composed of seventeen coaches, carrying over 1,300 people. Owing to the late arrival of the train the reception arranged by the board of trade was deferred until 1:30 to-morrow morning. The board of trade issued an invitation to the business men of the city to attend.

REED'S DEATH.

Examination of the Witnesses to the Affray—The Case to be Closed To-day.

As the investigation of the death of Salmon E. Reed, from injuries inflicted by William McDougal in Mead's restaurant last Friday, draws to a close, the case looks better for the prosecution, and in the opinion of those acquainted with it, that nothing more serious than manslaughter can be alleged against him, if even that. The party of which Reed was a member, after having been shot by a fellow member, and after having had one Reed was not satisfied, but in his stubborn drunkenness so aggravated McDougal that the latter resented the insult with an effect wholly beyond his intention.

The testimony of Mrs. Louisa Mead, keeper of the restaurant where the affray took place, before the coroner, yesterday afternoon, was unimportant, as she went out of the room, fearing a fight before any blows were struck. James McDougal, the waiter, an eyewitness of the murder, testifies as follows: McDougal came to dinner about 12 o'clock. He was with Reed, Lyons and Duffy, who asked him if they could get oysters. There was loud talking and swearing, but I know not who used the profane language. When the meal was over, Reed, Lyons and Duffy went to the office to learn the cause of the trouble, but from what I heard and saw I supposed they were in fun. When McDougal's dinner was ready I went and called him to come in, and he said he would be right in a minute. He stepped into the room and asked what they wanted. They said they had called for oysters, and that he (McD.) had insulted them. McDougal denied that he had, and walked over to the dining room door. Lyons said McDougal had something in his hand or pocket (I don't know which) at that time. Lyons was standing between McDougal and Lyons, and he said, "Get out, you damned scoundrel, and get out of the way and let me to this." McDougal said, "Let him come." I told Lyons I wanted no fuss and for him to leave the house, which he refused to do. I again told him that Mrs. Mead allowed no fussing and that unless he left I would call the police. Duffy took hold of Lyons telling him they would have to leave and they went out together. Reed told me to get the d-d police and could find and "he wouldn't go out."

Lyons came back into the house, called McDougal "a bastard son" and said, "Come on out on the side walk and let us lick you." McDougal came to the office, and I told him to remain in the dining room, which he refused to do, but retained his position at the door. Reed made some remark to McDougal, who also replied, but I heard nothing that either of them said. As I was very busy at the time trying to get Reed to leave the house, McDougal threw a chair at Lyons as he was going out the door, but I didn't know whether it hit him or not. Lyons then came in, and I saw him throw a chair at McDougal, who was in the dining room. Reed was in the kitchen, and I saw him throw a chair at McDougal, who was in the dining room. Reed was in the kitchen, and I saw him throw a chair at McDougal, who was in the dining room.

Fred E. Schaub, switchman on the Indianapolis, Peru & Chicago railroad and E. B. Mead, son of the proprietress of the restaurant, both testified to-day by Coroner Wishard. Schaub says he got into the restaurant, Lyons and Reed were drunk. Lyons and Duffy went out for a short time, and when they did so, McDougal was trying to get Reed to leave. Lyons and Duffy were quarrelling with McDougal and attempted to get the weight to hit him. When McDougal threw the weight, it was said that it struck Lyons, but I don't think it struck Lyons, but I don't think it struck Lyons, but I don't think it struck Lyons.
